The Team Roster

Deal: _____ Date: _____

Part B: First contact.

Takes in: the deal timeline.

Hands to: the right pro at the right time.

You do not need all seven on day one. You need to know which one the deal needs this week.

Who, when, what to ask, and the answer that should worry you

Who	Hire them when	Ask them	Red-flag answer
Real estate attorney	Before the offer	"How many park deals have you closed in this state?"	"We can figure out the park specifics as we go."
CPA	Before the offer	"How should I hold this asset, and what will it cost at tax time?"	"Just put it in an LLC and do not worry."
Insurance broker	During diligence; quotes before the offer	"What will this park cost to insure, and what will you not cover?"	"The seller's policy number is close enough."
Inspector	During diligence	"What fails first in parks this age, and what did you find here?"	"Looks fine from the road."
Engineer (sewer / water)	During diligence, before EMD goes hard	"Scope the lines. Tell me what is patched vs replaced."	"The system is old but it works."
Lender	Before the offer, earlier with a seller note	"What down payment and coverage do you need on a park this size?"	"We lend on the asking price."
Manager	Before closing	"Walk me through your last eviction and your last late-payer talk."	"I do not really keep records."

How to run the roster

- [ ] Hire the attorney first. Every other hire's paperwork runs through them.
- [ ] Get insurance and tax numbers before the offer, not after (AS-28).
- [ ] Pay for the sewer scope before EMD goes hard. It is the cheapest expensive lesson in this business.
- [ ] Ask each pro for their fee and scope in writing before they start. Compare scope, not just price.

Licensing and permit rules vary by state. Confirm with your attorney.

Vet every answer against your own evidence. A good team tells you what the documents say, not what you want to hear.

Worked example

Fictional example: Maple Bend Estates. No fees are shown: ask each pro for their fee and scope in writing before they start.

Day	Hire	Key question asked
1	Attorney	"How many park deals have you closed in this state?"
3	CPA	"How should I hold this asset, and what will it cost at tax time?"
5	Insurance broker	"Quote this park in my name, not the seller's policy number."
10	Inspector	"What fails first in parks this age, and what did you find here?"
12	Engineer	"Scope the sewer lines. Tell me what is patched vs replaced."
20	Lender	"What down payment and coverage do you need on a park this size?"
30	Manager	"Walk me through your last late-payer talk."

Diligence window: 45 days. Sewer scope done on day 18: 45 - 18 = 27 days left to price what it found. Every hire's paperwork runs through the attorney.

The Doctrine

The belief this tool shatters is that you hire help when you are stuck. By then the window is closed. The one rule: every pro has a window, and you book them in the window, not after. The attorney goes first, before the offer. Insurance and taxes get quoted before the offer, not after the ambush. The sewer scope happens before the EMD goes hard. And the answers matter more than the resumes: the red-flag answer tells you to keep looking, and a pro who tells you what the documents say instead of what you want to hear is the whole hire. Vet every answer against your own evidence. A good team tells you what is true, not what is easy.
